Your opinion

What are the main good things for children about having an overnight outdoor education visit?

Children and Young People experience overnight outdoor educational visits is vital to continued personal and social development and is in-line with the 5 way ways to wellbeing; giving individuals the opportunity to take notice, to connect, to be active, to learn and to give. The impact that both 'green time' and 'blue time' have on some of our Country's hardest to reach Young People is noticeable after even a short residential/outdoor activity session. As a Youth Service, we offer DofE award and The Outreach and Community Teams offer activities ranging from weekend residentials to places such as Outward Bound Trust, Fishing, Bushcraft, hill walking and much much more. Living in a National Park, we often find that children and Young People who reside here, often have had no interaction or contact with the park and its wild spaces, even with it being on their doorstep. It gives Young People the freedom to explore, play and learn in a safe and organised manner. Last year, during my time as a Lead Worker for Ukrainian Resettlement, I took a group of Ukrainian Young People on a coastering trip facilitated by an outdoor pursuit company, which allowed those Young People to meet with their peers and enjoy free time engaged in an activity that was totally alien and unheard of to them. They absolutely loved it.
