I am writing as an individual to express my concern at the proposal that it will no longer be necessary for Local Authorities to post details in the local press of statutory notices. Local newspapers provide vital information to the community on a wide range of subjects, such as licensing applications, road closures and planning.

I know there are other ways of doing this but even with access to the internet one has to be proactive to look for these notices. Local papers provide a vital link within the community which the internet and social media does not. The loss of income and unintended consequences are too great to ignore.

I am an 80 years old and have always seen these local authority notices as a vital community service.

I am happy for my name and concerns to be published in your final summary.
